AVIATION REPAIR SHOP OPENING ITS DOORS AT YEAGER AIRPORT

Today, the Central West Virginia Regional Airport Authority (CWVRAA) Board approved the lease agreement between Yeager Airport and PF Flyers. PF Flyers is a FAA 145 aircraft and avionics repair station that is going to open a location at Yeager Airport

A part 145 repair shop can provide maintenance, inspect and alter an aircraft, or aircraft products. The PF Flyers maintenance shop and office space will be located at the Capital Jet Center.

“We could not be more excited to welcome this business to West Virginia,” said Yeager Airport Director and CEO, Nick Keller. “I would like to thank the West Virginia Legislature, Governor Jim Justice, the West Virginia Development Office, and the Kanawha County Commission for their roles in passing Senate Bill 305. Without the passage of that bill, this would not have been possible.”

Senate Bill 305 exempts aviation maintenance shops from the consumers sales and service tax for an aircraft of any size. States surrounding West Virginia have similar laws.

PF Flyers is a family owned and operated business, and its West Virginia shop will be the company’s second location. Its original location and headquarters are in Greenville, South Carolina. The company’s leadership team has 60 years of aviation maintenance experience and are all pilots.

“PF Flyers is going to be a great addition to Yeager Airport, their commitment and dedication to their craft is top notch,” Keller continued. “This is another step in making Yeager Airport a one-stop-shop for anyone who wants to do business in West Virginia.”
